Second Sunday of Easter (Divine Mercy Sunday) (C)

Since the sixteenth century and earlier, there has been great devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus in the Church. People have reflected on the love that Jesus has for us in His heart, the amount of heartache that he willingly suffered for us, how his Heart was pierced with a lance on the cross, with blood and water flowing out, and how His heart still aches for us to turn from sin and to love Him.

When the soldiers pierced Jesus' side, they left a wound in his side. In today's Gospel, Jesus appears to the apostles after his resurrection, and takes Thomas' hand and places it into his wounded side. Thomas can now reach in and touch the heart of Jesus, and precisely when he does, his whole outlook changes. He is overcome because he sees Jesus' heart wounded for the love of humanity. This is what love is: love suffers for the other, and Thomas now sees the suffering love of Jesus before his eyes. Thomas also sees the pain caused by man's ingratitude and lack of belief, including his own lack of belief. This moves him very deeply. Jesus' heart, he perceives, is full of mercy; Jesus takes upon Himself the sin of mankind instead of inflicting on humanity the just punishment for sin.

Divine Mercy forgives, heals and restores. As Thomas encounters the Sacred Heart of Jesus he is forgiven, healed and restored. His heart is changed into a heart of love; his doubt changes to belief and he says 'my Lord and my God'.

Today is also known as Divine Mercy Sunday. The Divine Mercy is another devotion, based on visions that a Polish nun (and canonized Saint) called Sr. Faustina Kowalska had of Jesus. In the visions, she saw streams of red and white light flowing from His heart, symbolizing the blood and water that flowed from it on the cross. Sr Faustina received many messages from Jesus expressing His longing for sinners to return to Him. Jesus said to her, 'I desire that the Feast of mercy' - (which is today) - 'be a refuge and shelter for all souls, and especially for poor sinners. On that day the very depths of My tender mercy are open. I pour out a whole ocean of graces upon those souls who approach the fount of My mercy.'

In today's Gospel passage, Jesus explains how His mercy will be dispensed. It will be through the power He gives His apostles to forgive sins in His name, 'whose sins you forgive they are forgiven, whose sins you retain they are retained.' This is the power that Jesus Christ gives to his priests, and which is available to us all in the Sacrament of Penance.

Like St Thomas, if we reach out to touch the Lord's heart, we will find healing for our own wounds. Jesus wants to change us, and to configure us to Himself, so that we resemble Him more and more in the way we live and act.
