ELEVENTH SUNDAY OF ORDINARY TIME (B)

In the Gospel today Jesus describes the Kingdom of God with the parable of the mustard seed. The farmer in the parable scatters the seed all round, and then, slowly but imperceptibly the seed begins to sprout. The seed has intrinsic power and grows of its own accord. The farmer can help it to grow by watering, weeding and fertilising the ground, but ultimately he is not in control of the process. He cannot make the ripe grain appear ahead of its appointed time; he does what he can do, and then waits in trust and patience for the harvest – and when the harvest comes he is ready to reap it.

With this parable, Jesus explains that the Kingdom of God is a divine work, not a merely human achievement. God brings about its growth, which at times is imperceptible. We cooperate with the process but we cannot control it ourselves. The Kingdom will be established as we submit our lives to Christ and recognise Him as our king. We come to Him in humility, knowing our weaknesses and vulnerability, and our need of Him. The first reading gives us hope because it shows that God has special regard for the lowly who seek him. 'He stunts tall trees and makes the low ones grow.' This evokes the words of Mary in the Magnificat; 'He casts the mighty from their thrones and raises the lowly.'

The Kingdom of God is for everyone who wishes to enter it, for the poor and lowly, and for repentant sinners. God works with us to bring about His harvest, to gradually perfect us so we become more like Him. This is not something we can achieve by our own efforts. As with the farmer in the parable, it is a work of God. Yet we must do our part too. Our part in bringing about the Kingdom is to live an upright life, to live the commandments and beatitudes, to become virtuous, avoid sin and do penance. But even this can only be done by the grace of God.

Today's psalm speaks of being 'planted in the house of the Lord' – that is what happened to us when we were baptised; we were planted in God's house – and by remaining close to Him we can continue to bear fruit throughout our lives, even if we are old.

Every good act that we can do, however small, will help to bring about the Kingdom, because God's grace magnifies our good actions, when done in union with Him. Through His power the tiny seed becomes a big shrub and puts out branches, by which others can benefit. In a world where a person's worth is judged by success and celebrity, let us have faith that God can work through each one of us: even if we are weak and insignificant, God can use us for good.
