TWENTY-FOURTH SUNDAY OF ORDINARY TIME (B)

In today's Gospel, Jesus asks His disciples two questions. First He says, 'who do people say that I am?' This is easy for them to answer; they report what they have heard, 'Some say you are John the Baptist, others Elijah, others again say one of the Prophets'. But Jesus' second question confronts them personally. Who do you say that I am? This is harder, because they are now compelled to declare what they believe about Him. They have been with Him a long time and know He is no ordinary man; they witnessed his miracles and have been taught by Him. Peter is the only one brave enough to say what they all know; 'You are the Christ'. Perhaps they were frightened of the consequences of declaring Christ as God: if He truly is the Christ, then they must give their whole lives to Him.

Jesus elaborates on His mission, given Him by the Father. He is destined to suffer grievously, be rejected, suffer, die and rise again. But this is apparently too much for Peter. He is happy with a divine Lord, but not a suffering one. He fails to perceive that, as Isaiah prophesied in today's first reading, Jesus is the suffering servant, who offers no resistance to his murderers, but is obedient to the Father's will, who takes up His cross and goes to Calvary to redeem humanity. Peter is harshly rebuked; 'Get behind me, Satan!' Our Lord calls Peter 'Satan', because he tries to tempt Him away from the cross.

Peter is very human like all of us, and he tries to resist the cross. He is not yet able to face it. But Jesus says, 'if anyone wants to be a follower of mine, let him renounce himself, take up his cross and follow me.' To be a Christian means to take up the cross. Difficulties, sicknesses, sudden crises, personal defects, and family conflicts – all of these form the cross in our daily life. Jesus calls us to bear the burden and follow in His footsteps. He is with us, and gives us the grace we need to endure. We can merit and profit from suffering, if it leads us closer to union with Him. The alternative is to avoid the cross, or to let its weight drive us to despair, or perhaps to refuse to face it. All of these are temptations presented by Satan, who hates the cross. He tempts us to deceive us. It is through the cross that our salvation comes; there is no crown of glory without the cross.

Enduring suffering ourselves can make us more responsive to the sufferings of others, because we come to recognise the suffering Christ in our brothers and sisters who also suffer. The letter of St James stresses that faith without good works is dead. Our faith must move us beyond ourselves.

Jesus does not promise us a rose garden. Being His disciple brings both pain and joy. He himself has suffered, died and risen again. That is the pattern for us too. He does not abandon us. To carry the cross with Him and to forget ourselves is what brings us peace and strength that the world cannot give.
